ACT OF STATE

——— Acts done by Government in exercise of its sovereign rights—Status of non feudatory zamindars in Central Provinces—Withdrawal from non feudatory zamindars the Police Excise and Cattle pounds administration—Withdrawal of other rights in wajib ul arz or administration paper—Police Act (V of 1861)—Excise Act (X of 1871)—Cattle Trespass Acts (III of 1857 and I of 1871)—Central Provinces Land Revenue Act (XVIII of 1881) The plaintiffs in these appeals were members of a group of non feudatory zamindars in the Central Provinces whose status was in 1864 determined by the Government to be that of ordinary British subjects When they first came by conquest or cession under British rule the management of their estates and the judicial and administrative powers exercised by them were left in their hands as a matter of convenience or economy of administration and in no case were they recognised as entitled to independent powers or as possessing any sovereign rights In 1874 sanads giving them proprietary rights in the soil were granted but subsequently at various times the Government withdrew from them the Police and Excise administration and also the rights they had exercised in respect of cattle pounds and in 1903 they were required by the settlement officials to execute (which they did under protest) wajib ul arzes containing provisions restricting their rights in various ways which they considered prejudicial to their interests and prestige In suits brought by them against the Secretary of State in which they complained that they had been illegally deprived of rights to which they had been indefeasibly entitled from time immemorial and that the contents of the wajib ul arzes were in derogation of their undoubted privileges Held that in the exercise of the Police and Excise functions the plaintiffs were acting not as of right but either by sufferance or by delegation and that the resumption of those functions by the Government was an act done by the Government in the exercise of its sovereign powers and consequently the suits were not maintainable in the Civil Courts The maintenance of private cattle pounds was incompatible with the provisions of the Cattle Trespass Act and their establishment under the superintendence and control of Government as being under the circumstances essential for the maintenance of law and order and the peace and

The shroff also filed a counter suit against Government to recover R1 095 which he alleged were wrongfully recovered from him Both suits were heard together The District Judge dismissed both suits holding that Government had suffered a loss by the shroff s action but it was compensated by the money already paid by the shroff Against this decision both parties appealed While the appeals were pending in the High Court the shroff died and his son was brought on the record as his legal representative —Held that the maxim actio personalis moritur cum persona did not apply to the case as there was an obligation implied by law The shroff undertook to pass only Babashai coins and it was an implied term of that contract that if he passed any other and Government suffered loss he should make it good (s 211 of the Indian Contract Act 1872) Held further that the fact that Government had kept and had the benefit of Shikkai coins was not sufficient by itself to raise any presumption of either estoppel or acquiescence or ratification on the part of Government Held also that the action of the Mint officers in accepting the Shikkai coins could bind Government only so far as they had derived benefit from the action of the Mint officers that that benefit made them liable only so far that it was to be taken into account in measuring the damages for the loss sustained by Government in consequence of the shroff s deviation from the directions given to him and the purpose of this employment Held therefore that in estimating the loss suffered by Government owing to the shroff s action the bullion value of the Shikkai coins must be taken into account for they had on the date they were accepted ceased to be current coin It is a principle that nominal damages are awarded only where there is failure to prove any appreciable damage in fact CHUNI LAL v SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA (1910) I L R 35 Bom 12

Against the order of the Assistant Resident the plaintiff appealed to the Resident at Aden and on the 23rd September 1903 presented an application under s. 8 of the Aden Act (II of 1864) to state a case to the High Court upon certain questions specified in the application The Resident however on the next day that is on the 24th September summarily dismissed the appeal under s 551 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) The judgment dismissing the appeal was read out to the plaintiff on the 7th October following when she attended the Court The plaintiff thereupon preferred an application for revision to the High Court praying that the order dismissing the appeal might be quashed and that the Resident be required to state a case A question having arisen as to whether the High Court had jurisdiction to interfere in revision with any order passed by the Resident in the exercise of his Civil jurisdiction under the Aden Act (II of 1864) Held that with regard to questions which might arise regarding cases to be stated by the Resident for the decision of the High Court under the provisions of s 8 of the Aden Act (II of 1864) the Resident s Court is subordinate to the High Court Under s 15 of the Aden Act (II of 1864) as the Court of the Resident is to be guided by the spirit and principle of the laws and regulations in force in the Presidency of Bombay and administered in the Courts of that Presidency not established by Royal Charter and in the High Court in the exercise of its jurisdiction as a Court of Appeal from those Courts the provisions of the Suits Valuation Act (VII of 1887) are the law for the time being for the valuation of claims in the Courts of the Resident of Aden Held further that the plaintiff s claim being valued at R130 according to the law for the valuation of claims for the time being in force and according to the rulings of the Bombay High Court it did not fulfil the requirements of s 8 of the Aden Act (II of 1864) so as to give the plaintiff a right to demand the statement of the case upon any question of fact or law arising in the suit RHIMBAI JAMALBHOY v MARIAM BINTE ABDUL (1903) I L R 34 Bom 267

of a deceased Hindu vests the estate in the Administrator General and enables him to dispose of immovable property without the consent of the Court The administration cannot be treated as closed until every act necessary for its completion has been done Hence a sale by the Administrator General of some immovable property of the deceased for the purpose of realising the commission due to him under the Act is a valid sale in the course of administration and it takes precedence over a prior sale effected by the heir of the deceased. 1 ———— What constitutes—Admission To constitute an admission the document needs not to be written by the party against whom it is used it is sufficient if it is found in his possession and his conduct thereto creates an inference that he was aware of its contents and admitted their accuracy but unless this is done the document cannot be used against him as proof of its contents What conduct would properly gives rise to such inference depends on the facts of each case The mere fact of possession of letters is not of much value unless it is shown that their contents were recognized and adopted by the replies elicited or the conduct inspired by them BARINDRA KUMAR GHOSE v EMPEROR (1909) I L R 37 Calc 467

happened on the occasion of the commission of the offence and put forward by way of defence are admissible as admission notwithstanding that they are shown by other evidence to be untruthful. So where the accused told the police that certain other persons had killed the deceased described the occurrence and stated that he was seized by them but escaped and concealed himself in a paddy field that he went to the houses of several people for assistance against the murderers but was turned away as a mad man and that he then went and slept at the house of another person Held that the statements were admissible in evidence. A useful test as to the admissibility of statements made to the police is to ascertain the purpose to which they are put by the prosecution. If the prosecution relies on the statements as true they may and probably in many cases will be found to amount to confessions. If they are relied on not because of their truth but of their falsity and as a circumstance thereby tending to prove the guilt of the accused they are admissible as admissions. But a statement by the accused to the police that a mark found in the dhoti which he was wearing at the time of the occurrence was a blood stain was held under the circumstances (re the distance he was from the place of the murder and his prevarication as to the nature of the mark) to be of an incriminating character from which an inference might possibly though not necessarily be drawn. Where the only evidence that a witness could not be found was the statement of a police officer that search had been made for him to summon him but he could not be found that a warrant was also issued and that he was a man of another district but no warrant was produced and there was no evidence of any attempt to serve it or if so of what was done for the purpose. Held that sufficient ground had not been established for the admission of the previous deposition of the witness under s 33 of the Evidence Act. To justify the inference of guilt from circumstances the inculpating facts must be shown to be incompatible with the innocence of the accused and incapable of explanation on any other reasonable hypothesis than that of guilt. 5 ———— Retracted confession—Evidence Act (I of 1872) ss 21 30—Relevancy. For a conspiracy to wage war no act or illegal omission is necessary the agreement of two or more will suffice. While admissions which include confessions are by s 21 of the Evidence Act 1872 declared relevant and may be proved as against the persons making them all that s 30 of the Evidence Act provides is that the Court may take them into consideration as against other persons. This distinction of language is significant and shows that the Court can only treat a confession as lending assurance to other evidence against a co accused and a conviction on the confession of co accused alone would be bad in law. Moreover under s 30 that only can be taken into consideration which is a confession in the true sense of the term so that to place any reliance on a retracted confession against a co accused would be most unsafe. Yasin v Emperor I L R 28 Calc 689 referred to. A retracted confession cannot ordinarily take the place of legal proof. EMPEROR v LALIT MOHAN CHUCKERBUTTY (1911)

18(a) ———————— The question of adverse possession is a mixed question of fact and law The facts found by the Judge must be accepted but the conclusion drawn from them namely whether the possession was adverse or not is a question of law

To prove dispossession of one co sharer by another it must be shewn that there was exclusion or ouster to the knowledge of the former and this principle is applicable to all cases of co owners and is not confined to cases where the co owners were persons who at one time had formed members of a family

The possession of one co owner is the possession of all for the purpose of limitation.

There can be no dispossession by one joint tenant in the absence of an assertion of a hostile title by him to the knowledge of the other joint tenants sought to be excluded from the joint tenancy and if no notice is given to the co sharer of of the denial of his right the occupant must make his possession so visibly hostile and notorious and so apparently exclusive and adverse as to justify the inference of knowledge on the part of the co owner sought to be ousted and of laches if he fails to discover and assert his rights JOGENDRA NATH MUKHERJEE v RAJENDRA NATH BHATTACHARJEE

26 ———— Co sharers—In order to establish adverse possession between co-sharers there must be evidence of an open assertion of a hostile title by one with the knowledge of the others. Mere non partition in profits by one and exclusive occupation by others is not sufficient. JAGANNATH MARWARI v SRI CHANDRI BIBI 26 C W N 65

27 ———— Partition decree—Property remaining in possession of Judgment debtor—Limitation. The defendant obtained in 1890 a decree against the Plaintiff to recover his share in lands by partition. He applied in 1899 and 1902 to execute the decree but the land remained in possession of Plaintiff. In 1911 defendant managed to get possession. Plaintiff sued in 1915 to recover possession. Held dismissing the suit that though the Defendant went in possession without intervention of the court his possession would be ascribed in the decree and plaintiff could turn him out if she could show she had acquired a good title against the world before he got possession. RAKHMABAI v RAM CHANDRA I L R 45 Bom 943

28 ———— Trespasser—Where the original title is unknown and both parties in a suit for ejectment give evidence of possession the Court will be justified in deciding in favour of one party or the other by a comparison of the evidence judged in the light of probabilities. Such possession has to be interpreted according to the fairest view of what the property itself (in this case forest land) was capable of in the way of possession and what upon a broad view would be considered an adequate assertion of title by sufficient occupation.

But where the Plaintiff has succeeded in proving a clear title the onus lies on the Defendant to prove adverse possession for the statutory period and possession to be adverse must have all the qualities of adequacy continuity and exclusiveness

When the holder of title proves that he too has been exercising during the currency of his title various acts of possession then the quality of these acts even though they might have failed to constitute adverse possession as against another may be quite sufficient to destroy that adequacy and interrupt that exclusiveness and continuity which is demanded from any person challenging by possession the title which he holds KRISHNAN (ALIAS KUTHALITI) MOOTHAVAR v PERINGATI KUNHABANKUTTY HAJI 26 C W N 666

——— Gradual accretion to an already existing lanka—Slow and imperceptible meaning of—Land added in the bed of the river by slow imperceptible and gradual river action to a known extent of land applicability of law of accretion to The plaintiff respondent sued for a declaration against Government that a certain lanka or alluvial island formed in the bed of the Godavari at a place where it was both tidal and navigable belonged to him as an accretion to his adjoining lanka It was found by the Court below with which finding the High Court agreed that the suit lanka was originally formed in contiguity with the plaintiff s land that it was formed very rapidly and in some years during the annual rise of the river large additions were made which could not but be perceptible as soon as the water subsided that portion of the alluvial land was separated from the rest by a channel a few years before the suit and that it was not possible to say that the accretion was slow or imperceptible Held that the suit land was an accretion to the plaintiff s land that in applying the rule of English law as to accretions local physical conditions must be taken into consideration and that in the case of large rivers in India like the Godavari which on occasions leave large and sudden deposits it is not necessary that the accretion should be slow or perceptible Rex (nom Gifford) v Yarborough 2 Bligh (N S) 147 and Attorney General v McCarthy 2 Ir R 260 referred to Srinath Roy v Dinabandhu Sen I L R 42 Calc 489 applied Held also that the fact that in 1870 when the suit lanka was not as yet formed the extent and boundaries of the plaintiff s lankas were known as ascertainable did not render the law of accretion inapplicable Attorney General of Southern Nigeria v John Holt & Co (Liverpool) Limited [1915] A C 519 612 followed THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA v RAJAH OF VIZIANAGARAM (1916) I L R 40 Mad 1083

——————— Appeal jurisdiction not questioned in—Jurisdiction—Court—Consent of the parties as to jurisdiction—Suit of value beyond the jurisdiction of the Court—Trial of suit—Jurisdiction cannot be questioned in appeal—Evidence Act (I of 1872) s 58 The plaintiffs filed a suit for partition in the Court of the Subordinate Judge First Class valuing their claim at an amount which made the suit triable by that Court alone The Judge however made over the trial of the suit to the Joint Subordinate Judge In the latter Court neither party raised any objection on the ground of jurisdiction nor was any issue raised relating to it The trial proceeded on merits and a decree was passed in favour of plaintiffs The defendant appealed to the lower Appellate Court where he for the first time raised the question of jurisdiction on the strength of the market value stated in the plaint The objection was overruled On appeal —Held that the market value stated in the plaint primâ facie determined the jurisdiction Held further that as neither party raised any question as to want of jurisdiction in the first Court and as they by their conduct and silence treated the market value to be of the amount sufficient to give jurisdiction to the Court they dispensed with proof on the question by their tacit admissions and thus the principle of law laid down in s 58 of the Indian Evidence Act came into operation and prevented the result of the statement of the market value in the plaint As a rule parties cannot by consent give jurisdiction where none exists This rule applies only where the law confers no jurisdiction It does not prevent parties from waiving an inquiry by the Court as to facts necessary for the determination of the question as to jurisdiction where that question depends on facts to be ascertained JOSE ANTONIO v FRANCISCO ANTONIO (1910) I L R 35 Bom 24

——— Disposal of effect on primary judgment The effect of the disposal of an appeal from the decree of the primary Court is that if it is reversed it is absolutely dead and gone and if affirmed it is merged in the decree of the superior Court which takes its place for all intents and purposes The fact that an appeal has been dismissed under s 551 of the Code of 1882 or under O XLI r 11 of the Code of 1908 makes no difference in principle for the dismissal operates as a decree and supersedes the decree of the lower Court precisely in the same way as a decree of dismissal made after service of notice to the respondent CHANDRA KANTA BHATTACHARYA v LAKSHMAN CHANDRA CHAKRAVARTI (1916) 21 C W N 430

against to His Majesty in Council under s 595 and that provision cannot be restricted by the provisions of s. 588 (16) that such orders passed in appeal shall be final In this case which was an appeal from an order of the High Court confirming a sale in execution of decree and reversing an order of a Deputy Commissioner which set the sale aside it appeared that the judgment debtor had died pending the proceedings for attachment and sale leaving a widow and a minor son and that the whole of the proceedings subsequent to his death were without notice to any one representing the minor that the sale proclamation had not been properly made and did not contain the particulars required by s 287 of the Code of Civil Procedure 1882 especially those as to the value of the property which was grossly under estimated that the property was sold for a very inadequate price and that there was abundant evidence that the appellant had suffered substantial injury therefrom Held (reversing the decision of the High Court) that there had been no proper representation of the minor and that the above matters constituted material irregularities in publishing and conducting the sale within the meaning of s 311 of the Code which justified the setting aside of the sale There were concurrent decisions of the Courts in India that the Court of Wards never took charge of the property of the minor and their Lordships came to the same conclusion Held that inasmuch as the interests of the minor with regard to the property were not in fact represented by the Court of Wards it was open to his mother as his natural guardian to appear (as she had done) and represent him in the proceedings and his appeal was not rendered incompetent thereby KRISHNA PERSHAD SINGH v MOTI CHAND (1913) I L R 40 Calc 635

I REFERENCE TO ARBITRATION

1 ———— Letters Patent 1865 cl 15—Order of Judge refusing to decide whether arbitrators are going beyond scope of their authority — Judgment —Appeal—Construction of submission to arbitration—Insurance against fire—Liability of Company for further loss An order of a Judge dismissing a petition to revoke a submission to arbitration on the ground that the arbitrators are going beyond the scope of the reference is a judgment within the meaning of clause 15 of the Letters Patent and as such is appealable Such an order compels a party to submit to the jurisdiction of arbitrators though he complains that no such jurisdiction exists It decides a question of right namely whether or not he is by the terms of reference to arbitration deprived of his right at common law to have the dispute decided in the ordinary way in a Court of law It goes to jurisdiction and is not passed as an exercise of discretion The loss or damage by fire which is insured against in a policy of insurance cannot include loss caused by deterioration of the property insured consequent on neglect (if any) of the Insurance Companies to take care of it if they have taken possession A loss so caused is not an inevitable or direct consequence of the mischief by fire It is only where mischief arises from fire (in fire insurance cases) and from perils of the sea (in marine insurance cases) and the natural and almost inevitable consequence of that mischief is to create further mischievous results that underwriters become responsible for the further mischief so incurred Montoya v London Assurance Company 6 Ex 451 458 referred to The fact that a petition by nineteen different Companies was not signed by all the nineteen Companies and that the appeal from the order of the Judge dismissing the petition was by but one of the nineteen Companies and the other Companies were not parties to it would have required serious consideration if the Court had to revoke the submission to arbitration but when the order which the Court passes is only an intimation to

to vitiate the award without any imputation on the honesty or impartiality of the arbitrator but no such irregularities were established by the appellant on whom the onus of proving them lay An arbitrator selected by the parties comes within the general obligation of being bound to give evidence and where a charge of dishonesty or partiality is made any relevant evidence he can give is without doubt properly admissible It is however necessary to take care that evidence admitted as relevant on a charge of dishonesty or partiality is not used for a different purpose namely to scrutinize the decision of the arbitrator on matters within his jurisdiction and in which his decision is final The limitations applicable to the evidence of an arbitrator as witness in a legal proceeding to enforce his award are stated in the case of Buccleugh v Metropolitan Board of Works L R 5 H L 418 but where charges of dishonesty are made the Court would reject no evidence of an arbitrator which could be of assistance in informing itself whether such charges were established In this case the charges of dishonesty and partiality were held to have entirely failed Where part of an award was found to be invalid as being in excess of the arbitrator s powers and it was separable from the rest the remainder of the award being good was maintained It is generally desirable that an arbitrator should make and retain for sub equent use if necessary notes of the proceedings before him but there is no warrant for holding that in the absence of such notes an award should be set aside at the instance of one of the parties who must be held to have known the general course of procedure and who did not make any protest until after the making of the award with the terms of which she was not satisfied AMIR BEGAM v BADR UD DIN HUSAIN (1914) I L R 36 All 336

ASSAM LABOUR AND EMIGRATION ACT (VI OF 1901)

——— ss 2 152 162 164—Illegal recruitment of cooly—Repatriation at the expense of the employer—Jurisdiction of Magistrate In a case under s 164 of the Assam Labour and Emigration Act for illegal recruitment of coolies the Sub Deputy Magistrate while acquitting the accused made an order that the proprietor of the garden should deposit the expenses of repatriation of the coolies in question Held that the Sub Deputy Magistrate not being appointed by the Local Government within the meaning of s 2 of the Act his order was ultra vires That the order was also bad on the ground that the Sub Deputy Magistrate did not call upon the employer to show cause against the order there being an acquittal of the accused and nothing to show undue influence or coercion KING EMPEROR v RIHE CHAMAR (1914) 18 C W N 1143

——— R 57 of the Rules framed by the Chief Commissioner under s 12—R settlement of land previously settled by lease—Jurisdiction of Civil Court to examine if Collector had in mind while making settlement the instruction in Rule as to person to whom preference to be given Under r 57 of the rules framed by the Chief Commissioner under s 12 of the Assam Land and Revenue Regulation the previous settlement holder is to be ordinarily given preference in resettling a land previously settled by a lease In a suit by the previous settlement holder of land for declaration of his right to settlement the Civil Court has jurisdiction to see whether r 57 has been complied with It is not open to the Civil Court to go into the question of correctness or sufficiency of the reasons and once it appears that the revenue authorities took into their consideration the fact that preference should ordinarily be given to the settlement holder they have a discretion in the matter The Civil Court has power to see whether the Collector has found anything for excluding the plaintiff from the settlement and the reasons for such exclusion may appear not only in the Collector's order but in the office report and even in the petition of the parties or in other settlement papers JOY GOBINDO HAJAM v MUSSIT HAZIRA BIBI 24 C W N 149

the Aden Settlement For the year 1909 and 1910 the defendants had under the powers conferred upon them by Government Notifications assessed the plaintiffs in the annual rent of R7 000 payable by them under the lease In the year 1911 the defendants adopted a different basis of assessment They assessed the plaintiffs on the basis of half the produce of works less 10 per cent landlord s deductions In support of this method of assessment the defendants relied upon a method of valuation considered to have been in vogue for salt pans in Bombay in the year 18 and upon a decision which they had obtained in their favour from the Resident s Court at Aden in 1909 in respect of other salt works at Aden to which the alleged Bombay method of assessment was applied A question being raised whether the mode of assessment adopted by the defendants in the year 1911 was wrong and illegal Held that the mode of assessment was wrong and illegal as the defendants made no attempt to value the particular salt works in question or to say whether the method they applied was such as to result in the assessment that the hypothetical tenant of these premises would pay for them ABDULLABHOY LALJI v THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE ADEN SETTLEMENT (1918) I L R 42 Bom 692

Where a prisoner is unanimously acquitted of some of the charges and the jury are divided as to the rest and discharged and he is re tried under s 308 of the Criminal Procedure Code before a different jury he is not being tried again within the meaning of s 403 but his retrial is on the original indictment and plea and the Court continues the trial before another jury and the process may continue till a verdict is passed on all the counts S 403 of the Criminal Procedure Code has nothing to do with pleading being in terms a limitation on the jurisdiction of the Court and is not to be construed with reference to the English law of criminal pleading Ss 271 and 272 contain all that is necessary as to pleading without reference to the English rules Under s 271 the accused can only plead guilty or claim to be tried or he can refuse to plead but the plea of not guilty is intentionally not recognized by the Code If an accused claims to be tried he can subject to special provisions take any objection to his trial or conviction before the verdict of the jury and in any form A defence under s 403 may therefore be set up at any time before verdict and in any form and the question must be decided solely according to the terms of the section irrespective of the English law The question is one of law to be decided by the Judge without reference to the jury Semble That if the case was governed by English law (i) the prisoner having at the commencement of the retrial made a plea of not guilty which was still awaiting adjudication could not at the same time plead autrefois acquit and that the second plea was therefore unnecessary and of no effect Rex v Banks [1911] 2 K B 1095 referred to (ii) that the proper course would under that law have been to take a verdict from the jury at once on the plea Rex v Barry 7 C & P 836 referred to (iii) that under the same law a verdict on one count and disagreement on the others would not in the case of a retrial affect the trial on the latter Reg v Grimwood 60 J P 809 not followed S 34 of the Penal Code must be read according to its own terms without reference to the doctrine of the English law and applies only where a criminal act is done by several persons of whom the accused charged thereunder is one and not where the act is done by some person other than the latter Where therefore two persons fire at another and only one actually hits and kills him the other is not guilty of murder under ss 302 but of attempt to murder which offences do not constitute the same act Queen Empress v Mahabir Tiwari I L R 21 All 263 Govindas Namasudra v Emperor I L R 36 Calc 659 not followed There is no reason for saying that a person must be absent in order to abet under s 109 of the Penal Code The instigation of the unknown murderer by accompanying him to the place of occurrence and by aiding him in his flight afterwards might have taken place though the accused was not present at the murder But when the evidence shows that he was so present s 114 applies Ss 109 and 114 of the Penal Code supersede the English law as to principles in the first and second degrees and accessories before the fact The provisions of the Penal Code cover all the cases provided by that law and contain the whole law in India on the points Where the Judge has directed an acquittal under s. 302 of the Penal Code on legal grounds, the ——— Etiquette affecting Counsel—Counsel as witness—Retainer acceptance of—Professional ethics The following resolutions of the Bar Council approved — (a) If counsel knows or has reason to believe that he will be an important witness in a case he ought not to accept a retainer therein (b) If he accepts a retainer not knowing or having reason to believe that he will be such a witness but at the opening or at any subsequent stage before evidence is concluded it becomes apparent that he is a witness on a material question of fact he ought not to continue to appear in the case unless he cannot retire without jeopardising the interest of his client (c) If counsel knows or has reason to believe that his own professional conduct on matters out of which the action arises is likely to be impugned in the case he ought not to accept a retainer (d) If he accepts a retainer not knowing or having reason to believe that his own professional conduct in such matters is likely to be impugned but finds in the course of the case that it is so impugned he ought to adopt the same course of conduct as is mentioned in clause (b) ante (e) In either of the cases mentioned in clauses (b) and (d) there is no rule of professional ethics which debars counsel if he continues to act as counsel in the case from going into the witness box and being cross examined

Although the resolutions of the Bar Council are not binding on the Courts the Bar Council is the recognised authority on matters of professional conduct and etiquette affecting counsel and its opinion is of the greatest weight and value There is nothing necessarily unprofessional in counsel giving evidence in a case in which he appears as such Sellna v Mirza Mahomed Shiraz [illegible] Bom L R 1044 Cobbett v Hudson 1 E & B 11 Stones v Byron 4 Dowl & L 393 Deare v Packwood 4 Dowl & L 39an Corea v Peiri [1909] A C 549 14 C W N 86 Nundo Lal Bose v Nistarini Dassi I L R 27 Calc 428 referred to Curry v Walter 1 Esp 456 distinguished As a general practice however it is undesirable when the matter to which counsel depose is other than formal that they should testify either for or against the party whose case they are conducting Under s 118 of the Evidence Act counsel although they may be engaged

The principle that the effect of the appointment of a debtor to the office of the executor is that the debt due from the debtor executor is considered to have been paid to him by himself and that the executor is accountable for the amount of his debt as assets is not applicable where the alleged loan was by a former executor to one who subsequently to his death was appointed executor and the loan was already time barred at the latter date and there was nothing to show that the debt was kept alive up to that date The principle that the grant of probate operates retrospectively from the date of the death of the testator did not apply here where there was an intermediate executor who created the debt for which the executor who followed him was sought to be made liable as debtor In a suit for the construction of a will and for the administration of the estate left by the testator the costs in the absence of grounds established in favour of a departure should ordinarily be paid out of the estate UPENDRO NATH NAG v JOGENDRO NATH NAG (1915) 21 C W N 280

Evidence Act (I of 1872) 116 —No inference against litigant as to contents of documents he considers irrelevant—Omission of opposing litigant to put them in evidence in proper way A Hindu taluqdar who had two wives and a Muhammadan mistress and had already made substantial provision for the latter purchased a house with his own money in the name of the mistress and registered the deed also in her name He treated the house however as his own during his life time living in it paying for repairs and taxes and receiving rent for it when let as did his senior widow after his death and the mistress had no possession or use of the house In a suit by the senior widow to eject after due notice to quit a tenant to whom she had let the house whose defence was a denial of the plaintiff's title and an assertion that he held under the Muhammadan mistress who claimed title under the deed of sale in her name of which she had obtained possession Held (reversing the decision of the High Court and restoring that of the Subordinate Judge) that on the evidence in and under the circumstances of the case the deed of sale was and had remained throughout a benami transaction The general rule in India in the absence of all other relevant circumstances laid down in Dhurm Das Pandey v Shama Soondri Dibiah 3 Moo I A 229 that the criterion in these cases is to consider from what source the money comes with which the purchase money is paid followed It is open to a litigant to refrain from producing any documents which he considers irrelevant and if the opposing litigant is dissatisfied it is for him to apply for an affidavit of documents and he can so obtain inspection and production of all that appear to him in such affidavit to be relevant and proper If he fails to do so neither he nor the Court at his suggestion is entitled to draw any inference as to the contents of any such documents It is for the litigant who desires to rely on the contents of documents to put them in evidence in the usual and proper way if he fails to do so no inference in his favour can be drawn as to the contents of them A tenant who has been let into possession cannot deny his landlord's title however defective it may be so long as he has not openly restored possession by surrender to his landlord BILAS KUNWAR v DESRAJ RANJIT SINGH (1915)

(8) of Sch II of the Small Cause Courts Act and is not a suit of a Small Cause Court nature within the meaning of s 586 of the Civil Pro e dure Code of 1882 The mere fact of a sum of money having been declared under the Act to be payable by a landholder in respect of any land is not sufficient to make a tenant of the land liable to contribute towards it Cl (b) of s 42 of the Act requires that the landholder should show in the first instance that the land of any parti cular tenant against whom a claim has been made has been benefited by any scheme or works The Commissioners report under s 32 of the Act cannot be treated as primâ facie evidence in favour of the landlord in a suit to recover drainage charges against tenants Quære Whether the power of determining any question as to the amount which any tenant is to pay in respect of drainage charges is not intended to be exclusively vested in the Collector and whether a notice under sub s (2) of s 41 would not therefore be a necessary preli minary to the maintainability of a suit to recover such charges from a tenant BASANTA KUMAR RAI v RAM CHANDRA ROY CHAUDHURY (1903) 17 C W N 499

——— r 4 register of voters —R 7 application for removal of name of a voter from the register—Rr 6 and 10 application by the said voter for inclusion of his name in the register if lies when his name was already in the register— R 29 District Magistrate s powers A certain name was entered in the Register of voters prepared under r 4 of the Bengal Municipal Election Rules. Several applications were made to the Chairman of the Municipality under r 7 for removal of his name and the said voter too made an application under r 6 for inclusion of his name in the Register. All these applications were disposed of by the Chairman on the same date. He allowed the applications under r 7 and directed the name of the said voter to be removed from the register. The said voter thereupon applied to the District Magistrate under r 10 who restored his name in the register. On appeal it was contended that r 10 was inapplicable because the name of the said voter was already on the register when he made the application under r 6 for inclusion of his name therein. Held that the Chairman could not have dealt with the application of the voter in question before he had decided the applications under s 7 and he had not rejected the application of the said voter as premature. In these circumstances the application might well be regarded as having been presented on the day and after the applications under s 7 were disposed of although it was on the record from before. In that view the Magistrate had power under r 10 to make an order for the insertion of the name in the register. Besides r 29 gives a general power to the Magistrate to decide all disputes arising under the Rules so the Magistrate had power to decide the point under r 29. SYAM CHAND BASAK v NAGENDRA NATH BASAK

——— Its effect—Presumption applicable to a tenancy existing before the commencement of the Bengal Tenancy Act Cl (5) of s 5 does not create any new rights or purport to affect any right created before the commencement of the Bengal Tenancy Act It simply furnishes a mode of proof of the character of tenancies of certain de criptions If the area held by a tenant exceeds 100 standard bighas and a question arises as to the status of such a tenant the Legislature lays down that the tenancy is to be presumed to be that of a tenure holder but the presumption thus raised is rebuttable The clause is consequently a provision not of substantive but of adjective law It lays down a presumption and changes the burden of proof Whereas in the absence of the presumption the party who affirmed that the tenancy was of particular de cription would have to give evidence in support of his contention the pre umption where it applies relieves the party relying thereon from the obligation to furnish such proof in the first instance There is no valid reason why the presumption should not be applied to a tenancy which existed before the commencement of the Bengal Tenancy Act The presumption embodied in s. 5 clause (5) does not incorporate a novel principle into our law but merely codifies what had been a recognized doctrine under the old law The only difference caused by the adoption of the presumption is that we have now a definite rule of evidence a crystallized mode of proof Dhanput Singh v Cooman Singh (1864) W R Gap Act Y 61 Gopee Mohan v Sibchunder 1 W R 68 Sara Chandra v Ratubuddin 16 C L J 271 Cogdel v Railway Co 132 N C 852 followed The fact that a tenancy had been sub divided into two tenancies before the Bengal Tenancy Act would not prevent the application of sub s (5) of s 5 in determining the character of the tenancy The tenure was divisible and the fact of sub division was not a breach of its continuity Each fragment carved out of the original tenure retained its incident Adit v Sukhraj 17 C L J 435 Chandra Kanta v Ram Krishna 20 C W N 1002 followed Proof of the purpose of the original grant determines the real nature of the tenancy Durga v Kalidas 9 C L R 449 Promotho Nath Kumar v Nilmoni Kumar 14 C L J 58 Promoda Nath Roy v Asiruddin Mandal 15 C W N 896 followed Mahabir v Fox 9 C L J 467 Bu lul Karim v Satish Chandra 13 C L J 418 Nityananda v Nandi Kumar 13 C L J 415 In re School Board Election for Parish of Pulborough [1894] 1 Q B 725 In re Athlumney [1898] 2 Q B 547 Main v Stark 15 App Cas 384 Reynolds v Attorney General [1896] A C 240 Bengal Indigo Company v Roghobur Das I L R 24 Calc 272 referred to Maharam Chaprasi v Tclam ud din Khan 15 C L J 220 distinguished JAGABANDHU SHAHA v MAGNAMOYI DASSEE (1916) I L R 44 Calc 555

——— Sch III, Art 3—contd

——— Legitimate purpose and scope of—Governs relations of landlord and tenant only—Special limitation—Dispossession sufficient to deprive tenant of right of suit In determining what Art 3 of Sch III of the Bengal Tenancy Act means the purpose and scope of the Act which governs the relations of landlord and tenant only must not be left out of sight It was not the design of the Act to deprive a tenant of the rights that he otherwise possess against a third person between whom and himself there was no relationship of landlord and tenant It was only intended to deal with such rights as existed between landlord and tenant To deprive a tenant of his right of suit there must be a plain dispossession within the meaning of Art 3 of the Schedule KRISHNA CHANDRA BAGDI v SATISH CHANDRA BANERJI (1915) 20 C W N 872

——— Where a landlord keeps a raiyat out of possession of his holding for the period specified in Art 3 of Sch III of the Bengal Tenancy Act the raiyat s title in the holding is extinguished by adverse possession on general principles if not under s 28 of the Limitation Act NANDA KUMAR DEY v AJODHAYA SAHU (1911) 16 C W N 351

——— Rent sale—Purchase by sole landlord—Suit by tenant to recover possession alleging decree to be fraudulent—Limitation Where the sole landlord took possession of a holding as purchaser at a sale thereof in execution of a rent decree the tenant was not dispossessed by the landlord within the meaning of Art 3 of Sch III of the Bengal Tenancy Act Dispossession effected by the act of delivery of possession by the Court is not dispossession by the landlord within the meaning of Art 3 of Sch III of the Bengal Tenancy Act Aminuddin v Ulfatunissa Bibi 9 C L J 131 dissented from KAMALDHARI THAKUR v RAMESHUR SINGH BAHADUR (1913) 17 C W N 817

——— Suit for possession of land by raiyat or under raiyat—Relationship of landlord and tenant—Special rule of limitation when applies The plaintiff s suit was for recovery of possession of a holding governed by the Bengal Tenancy Act which had vested in her on the death of her husband The plaintiff s aunt who came to live with her after the death of plaintiff s husband brought the defendants on to the land to assist in its cultivation The defendants by their conduct compelled the plaintiff to leave the holding and take shelter somewhere else In the plaint there was a suggestion of collusion on the part of the plaintiff's landlord Held that as between the plaintiff and the defendants there was no relationship of landlord and tenant so that as between them the special law of limitation embodied in Art 3 Sch III of the Bengal Tenancy Act did not apply There having been in fact no dispossession by the landlord the mere suggestion that the landlord had a hand in the ouster did not bring the suit within Art 3 Sch III of the Act BASANTA KUMARY v NANDA RAM KAIBARTA DAS (1913) 17 C W N 1149

——— Limitation—Raiyat ejected by landlord acting in a capacity other than that of landlord—Suit for recovery of possession by tenant A suit for recovery of land by a raiyat who has been ejected therefrom by his landlord on the ground that the land occupied by the raiyat is the landlord s kamat land is governed by Art 3 of Sch III to the Bengal Tenancy Act 1885 Per CHAMIER C J—The operation of Art 3 is not limited to cases where the raiyat or under raiyat has been dispossessed by his landlord acting as such JAI MANGLABATI MISRAIN v JHAREE LAL DAS MOZUMDAR 2 Pat L J 561

——— Suit for joint possession by an heir of the tenant against co sharer landlords who have purchased from another heir—Special limitation—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885) Art 3 Sch III whether applicable The plaintiff an heir of the original tenant brought a suit for joint possession in respect of his share of the land against the defendants who were co sharer landlords who having secured a kobala of the entire land from another heir of the original tenant dispossessed the plaintiff from the land Held that the suit was governed by Art 3 Sch III of the Bengal Tenancy Act NABIN CHANDRA SAHA v SHEIKH WAJID (1920) 24 C W N 382

——— Landlord purchasing raiyati holding at rent sale and ousting tenant—Suit by tenant to recover—Limitation Where the landlord of a raiyati holding caused it to be sold in execution of a rent decree purchased it and settled it with new tenants a suit by the former raiyat to recover the holding would be governed by Art 3 Sch III of the Bengal Tenancy Act SATISH CHANDRA BOSU v NITYA GOPAL HALDER (1917) 21 C W N 978

——— Limitation—Dispossession by purchaser at sale held at landlord's instance if comes within article Dispossession by the purchaser at a sale held at the instance of the landlord is not dispossession by or at the instance of or in collusion with the landlord and the two years rule of limitation is not applicable to a suit for recovery of possession in such a case DURGAPADA PANJA v BHUSAN CH GHOSH (1916) 21 C W N 373

——— Purchase of holding by landlord in execution and consequent dispossession of raiyat—Limitation Art 3 of Sch III to the Bengal Tenancy Act applies even when the tenant has been dispossessed by the landlord on the strength of a purchase of the holding in execution. FANI BHUSAN SARKAR v PULIN CHANDRA MANDAL (1916) 21 C W N 976

——— Occupancy raiyat dispossessed by persons inducted by landlord—Landlord if may sue such persons only and avoid special limitation Where an occupancy raiyat is dispossessed by persons inducted on the holding by the landlord at his instigation and in collusion with him in a suit by the raiyat to recover possession the landlord is a necessary party and such a suit is governed by the limitation provided in Art 3 of the Sch III of the Bengal Tenancy Act RAJA PEARY MOHAN M[illegible] GHOSE

After the death of the plaintiffs vendor the Collector intervened under s 3 of the Bhagdari Act (Bom Act V of 1862) removed the plaintiffs and placed the Bhagdar in possession The plaintiffs having brought a suit against the Bhagdar to recover possession Held that s 3 of the Bhagdari Act (Bom Act V of 1862) was not applicable and the alienation to plaintiffs was not null and void that where rights were found to have existed before the Bhagdari Act (Bom Act V of 1862) in persons not themselves Bahagdars or Narwadars but the locus of whose rights fell within what were bhags or share in the Bhagdari and Narwadari village those rights never had been any portion of bhags or shares of Bhagdari or Narwadari village etc within the meaning of s 3 and therefore the prohibitions against alienations contained in s 3 had no applicability to that class of cases VENIDAS NARANDAS v BAI HARI (1914)

———— Municipal Com missioner—Notice disobedience of—Private streets—Levelling and draining of—Liability of owners of several premises—Owners of building sites—Build ings constructed by lessees on the sites—Premise what are—Construction of statutes The owner of a large plot of land sub divided it into a number of building sites which he arranged on either side of a private street which was projected to run through the plot Those building sites were let to lessees (of whom the applicant was one) for a period of thirty years at the end of the period the le see was to remove the building put up by him unless the lessor pur chased it Under the terms of the lease the lessee was to contribute rateably to the expenses of making repairing etc all ways roads etc The applicant was one of those lessees He built a house upon one of those sites and let it to tenants from whom he received rent The Municipal Com missioner of Bombay issued a notice to the appli cant under s 305 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act (Bombay Act III of 1888) calling upon him to level, metal drain and light the public street in front of his building The applicant failed to comply with the notice for which he was prosecuted under s 471 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act 1888 He contended that he was not the owner of the premises within the meaning of s 305 of the Act The Magistrate overruled the contention and convicted him Held that the mere owner of the land who had let it out under a building scheme for building purposes was not the owner of the property because the property contemplated by s 305 necessarily embraced buildings whether erected or to be erected and the Legislature regarded him as the owner of the premises who had the right to receive rent in respect of that property The word premises occurring in s 305 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act (Bombay Act III of 1888) must be presumed to have been used by the Legis lature in its legal sense as referring to the particular kind of property which forms the subject matter of the group of immediately preceding sections of the Act That group (ss 302—307) has reference to streets made for the use of buildings or building sites The dominant idea running through the ss 302—304 is that of buildings either erected or projected That is the kind of property dealt with in what has gone before s 305 and therefore that is its præmissa It is a primary rule of interpretation that a word having a popular meaning ought to be construed in that sense One exception to that rule is that unless there is some thing to the contrary in the context words of known legal import are to be considered as having been used in their technical sense where the law has attached that sense to them EMPEROR v RAMCHANDRA BHASKAR MANTRI (1910) I L R 34 Bom 593 carrying sullage from houses on either side of the lanes Under the provisions of s 305 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act (Bombay Act III of 1888) the Municipality issued a notice calling upon owners of the houses to level metal drain and light the lanes in question The owners having failed to comply with the notice the Municipality prosecuted them contending that the notice was properly issued since the sewer laid in the lanes did not make them public streets and the street did not include houses on either side of the streets —Held that the lanes in question having been sewered since 1883 they were public street and s 305 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act (Bombay Act III of 1888) had no application Held further that the term street as used in the Act included houses on either side of the street EMPEROR v RAMRAO VISHVANATH (1918) I L R 43 Bom 122

——— Reference by Government to High Court—Bombay Summary Settlement Act (Bom Act II of 1863) s 1—Summary Settlement—Inam Dharmadaya—Sanad—Jaghir—Treaty between the Government and the Native State—Lands whether held under a treaty or on political tenure Under s 12 of the Revenue Jurisdiction Act 1876 Government can refer a question for the decision of the High Court when investigating any claim or objection which before 1876 may have been excluded from the cognizance of a Civil Court In 1818 the British Government granted by a Sanad some villages in Chikodi and Manowlee as Inam Dharmadaya to be enjoyed from son to grandson etc from generation to generation Shortly afterwards the talukas of Chikodi and Manowlee were ceded by the British Government to the Maharaja of Kolhapur In 1821 the Raja of Kolhapur granted some more villages in the said talukas to the same grantee In 18[illegible] a treaty was concluded between the British Government and the Maharaja of Kolhapur One of the articles of the treaty provided that the Raja of Kolhapur promised to continue to the grantee his lands and rights and the British Government guaranteed enjoyment of those villages to the grantee for life provision being made that the rights of the grantee's descendants as founded on Sanad or custom should not be prejudiced by the cessation of the said guarantee As the Raja did not keep his promise not to molest the grantee the British Government made in 1827 a further treaty with the Raja of Kolhapur by which it was provided that the latter should give back to the former the said talukas in the same state in which he received them and that as the Raja had never ceased to annoy and harass the grantee by seizing his villages and other property it had been deemed necessary to extend the guarantee of the British Government to his descendants and the Raja accordingly engaged never to molest them Thereafter in 18[illegible]8 a question having arisen with regard to the villages granted by the Raja in the said talukas it was declared by the Government that the same should be allowed to remain in possession of the grantee as if the grant was made with the concurrence of the British Government In 1863 on the introduction of the Summary Settlement the Government was of opinion that no primâ facie case had been made out for excluding the grantee's lands from the benefit of the Summary Settlement on the ground of their being held on political tenure and the Summary Settlement was accordingly applied to the grantee's lands with his consent It was contended nearly sixty years afterwards that the lands in question being either lands held under a treaty or under political tenure were excepted from the provisions of the Bombay Summary Settlement Act 1863 Held (1) that at the time of Summary Settlement the lands in question were not held under a treaty for neither was it shown that the original title was under a term of treaty which remained in force nor that the treaty of cession guaranteed title (2) that the title of the grantee to the lands in question originated in the Sanads of 1818 and 1821 and that when the two talukas were given back by the Raja to the British Government in 1827 the existing rights of the grantee under the Sanads remained undisturbed pleno vigore and were so recognised by the British Government (3) that the grant was specifically described in the Sanad as Dharmadaya Inam and there was nothing to show that it was a Jaghir or held under political tenure (4) that therefore the Bombay Summary Settlement Act 1863 was properly applied to the lands in question Cook v Sprigg (1899) A C 5 and Sheikh Sultan Sani v Sheikh Ajmodin (1891) 17 Bom 431 distinguished In re VASUDEV HARIHAR PANDIT (1920) I L R 45 Bom 463

tioned settlement—Continuance of the terms of the sanctioned settlement after the expiration of the period as still being sanctioned A question having arisen as to whether under the settlement of the khoti village in suit which was sanctioned in 1863 and introduced in 1865 subject to all the provisions of the Survey and Settlement Act (Bom Act I of 1865) and thereafter for a fixed period of twenty seven years the Government was entitled on the expiration of the said period of twenty seven years to insist upon the terms imposed upon the Khot as between him and his tenants under the settlement as still being sanctioned Held that in 1892 when the fixed period of the settlement sanctioned in 1863 and introduced in 1865 came to an end the terms which had been imposed upon the Khot under s 38 of the Survey and Settlement Act (Bom Act I of 1865) when that settlement was introduced remained in force since the settlement itself must be deemed to have been then and still to have been sanctioned and that Government was within its rights in insisting upon the Khot accepting certain clauses in the kabuliyat of that year SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA v SADASHIV ABAJI (1911)

They also contended that being in actual possession of the land the onus was on the plaintiffs to rebut the presumption of ownership in fee attaching to the possession of land whether in a cantonment or elsewhere The title of the defendants was based on a document dated 27th August 1864 by which one Bevts a Purser in the Indian Navy certificated that for the consideration therein mentioned he handed over to Dorabjee Pestonjee all claim he had to the house out houses and premises generally marked 23 Staff Lines, Poona Cantonment This document was endorsed as sanctioned by the Brigadier General Commanding Held on a consideration of the mode of delimitation of the Poona Cantonment

the regulations affecting it the arrangements made with the owners of the lands taken to indemnify them for the loss they sustained by being deprived of their rights of occupancy and the other circumstances of the case (i) that even if the defendants established that their house was built at or before the time the cantonment was made there was still a strong probability that they were duly compensated for the change in their position as owners to that of licensees (ii) that from the regulations as summarised in Aitchison s Cantonment Code of 1836 and Jameson s Cantonment Code of 1850 it was clear that, though permission to occupy ground was frequently given especially for the building of officers houses or bungalows such permission carried with it no sort of proprietary right and the buildings were liable to expropriation at a price to be fixed by the authorities and the permission of the Commanding Officer was necessary even for the letting or sale of the house so built It was therefore impossible to say that mere possession or occupation of the bungalow on this site afforded any presumption whatever that the defendants or their predecessors in title were owners in fee The presumption was all the other way and was strengthened by an examination of the history of the site itself which showed that the defendants predecessors in title did not regard the property as differing in its tenure and terms from other property in the cantonment The defendants were therefore mere licensees and the land had been lawfully resumed by Government KAIKHUSRU ADERJI GHASWALA v SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA (1911) I L R 36 Bom 1

———— Tasdik— arrears of cash allowance suit to recover—Limitation Act (XV of 1877) Sch II Arts 131 62 The plaintiff the manager of the temple of Shri Laxmi Narayan Dev at Hukkal sued to recover from the defendants the managers of the temple of Shree Madhukeshwar at Banawasi a sum of Rs 90 as arrears of a cash allowance (tastik) which the former was entitled to receive from the property of the latter The defendants admitted the title of the plaintiff to the allowance but pleaded limitation as to the arrears for two out of the six years The lower Courts applied Art 131 of the Limitation Act 1877 and allowed the whole of the claim On appeal Held that the claim was properly allowed A cash allowance of the nature as in the present case is according to Hindu law nibandha or immoveable property where it is annually payable the right to payment gives to the person entitled a periodically recurring right as against the person liable to pay The right to any amount which has become payable stands as to such person on the same footing as the aggregate of rights to amounts which are to become payable and which have become actually due But where there are more than one person entitled to the payment as co sharer and the payment is made to one of them by the person liable to pay the co sharer receiving the amount holds it minus his share on behalf of the rest as money had and received for their use though as to him with reference to the aggregate of rights it is nibandha or immoveable property in the nature of a periodically recurring right The important question is who is the person sued and what is it that is sued for ? If what is sued for is the establishment of a title to the right itself then Art 131 applies whether the defendant is the person originally liable to pay or is a co sharer who has received payment from that person If on the other hand what is sued for is the amount of arrears which has become actually payable to the plaintiff then there is a distinction between the person originally liable to pay and a co sharer of the plaintiff who has actually received payment from that person Art 131 applies in that case

———— Regulation II of 1827 s 21—Caste question—Civil Court jurisdiction —Suit to be declared Ayya of Hiremath and to restrain defendant from so styling himself The plaintiff sued to obtain a declaration that he was entitled to the fees and privileges appertaining to the Hiremath at Kamalapur by reason of hi title to be called the Ayya of that Hiremath and to obtain a perpetual injunction to restrain the defendant from u ing the name of Ayya of Hire math. The plaintiff s complaint was that the defendant had assumed a name to which the plaint iff had the exclusive right and that that assump tion would enable as it had enabled the defendant to attract to him elf a large number of the plaint iff s follower and thereby appropriate to himself fees which would otherwise have be n paid to the plaintiff Held that it was a claim to a caste office and to be entitled to perform the honorary duties of that office or to enjoy certain privileges and honors at the hands of the members of the caste in virtue of that office It was a caste question not cognizable by a Civil Court Held al o that the fact that there had been no allegation of any speci fic damage by reason of the assumption by the de fendant of the name of Ayya of Hiremath and also the admission that after all the result of the assump tion of that name would be merely to enable some of the followers of the plaintiff to go over to the defendant showed that what the parties had been fighting for was merely a question of dignity under the cover of a religious office If the Court were to interfere in such cases it would be merely assisting one party at the expen e of the other and compelling the ca te or the sect to follow one spiritual leader in preference to another GADIGEYA v BASAYA (1910) I L R 34 Bom 455 for the district to assume superintendence of the joint family estate with a view to liquidate the debts Held that in making the application they acted within their power and authority as managing members and in the interest of all the members of the joint family and that inasmuch as no member had in the property any definite undivided share [Caribullah v Khalil Singh I L R 40 All ... L R ... I A 165 and Appovier v Rama Subba Aiyan 11 Moo I A ...] what was taken over by the Court of Wards on assuming superintendence of the estate was the property of all the members of the joint family The Chief Commissioner had power to sanction the assumption by the Court of Wards of the whole of the joint family property whether the application was made by the managing members only or by all the members of the family and the acts of the Court of Wards in dealing with the property after charge of it was assumed bound the interest of all the members The sanction of the Chief Commissioner to a mortgage of such property as required by s 18 of Act XVII of 1885 may be an implied sanction. By the terms of a mortgage made in 1891 by the Court of Wards in favour of the respondents (plaintiffs) on the security of the joint family estate the mortgage money (Rs 1 0 000 way repayable with interest by annual instalments of Rs 10 000 extending over more than 0 years and in the event of Rs 30 000 becoming over due the Court of Wards covenanted to recover such sum by sale or otherwise of sufficient of the mortgaged property If it was found impossible to continue to manage the estate the Court of Wards was either to sell up the entire property and devote the proceeds to the liquidation of the debt, or make over the estate to the mortgagees in satisfaction of their claim. In the event of the management being relinquished before the debt was liquidated in the ordinary course the Court of Wards was to liquidate the debt remaining due by the sale of such portion of the property as might be necessary The sum borrowed was applied to pay off the debts on the property Only Rs 16 000 was repaid up to 1893 and since then no instalment had been paid the Court of Wards owing to unforeseen circumstances finding its impossible to pay more either of principal or interest and in March 190 the Court of Wards after giving the mortgagees notice that the relinquishment by it of the management had been sanctioned offered to make over to them the mortgaged property in satisfaction of their claim excepting the cultivating rights of sir land which are to be reserved for the maintenance of the ward which the mortgagees declined as not being a compliance with the terms of the mortgage deed. In June 1902 the Court of Wards relinquished the management of the estate without selling it or transferring it to the mortgagees In a suit brought in 1904 on the mortgage for sale and recovery of the amount due Held (affirming the decisions of the Courts in India) that on the terms of the mortgage and under the circumstances of the case the whole sum payable on the mortgage had become due on the relinquishment of the management by the Court of Wards and the usual decree for sale was made GULAB SINGH v GOKULDAS (1913) I L R 40 Calc 784

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898) ss ... ( ) 233 234 S 2... ( ) of the Criminal Procedure Code refers to cases of criminal breach of trust or dishonest misappropriation of money and cannot be applied to a case under s. 477A of the Penal Code. Queen Empress v Mati Lal Lahiri I L R 25 Calc 559 referred to. S 233 of the Code must be strictly followed save where the law itself provides an exception. A joinder of three charges under s. 409 with three under s 477A of the Penal Code relating to different transactions is not warranted by any of the exceptions provided in the Code and is illegal. Such a misjoinder is absolutely fatal to the trial. Subrahmania Ayyar v Emperor I L R 30 Mad 328 and Subrahmania Ayyar v King Emperor I L R 25 Mad 61 followed. A series of falsifications of accounts made to cover a single act of defalcation may be laid in one charge under s 477A of the Penal Code and does not constitute distinct offences merely by reason of a plurality of false entries intended to cover the same defalcation. KADAM ALI v EMPEROR I L R 47 Calc 154

9 ———————— Form and Proof of—An accused is entitled to know with certainty and accuracy the exact nature of the charge brought against him. But where the accused fully understood the nature of the offence with which they were charged they had clearly not been prejudiced by the omission of the words "unlawfully and maliciously" and "in British India" occurring in s 4 (b) of Act VI of 1908. Such an omission can be cured by the verdict. The Queen v Mansfield [1895] 1 Q B 758 referred to. Where the illegal act charged under s 120 B is the unlawful and malicious possession of explosive substances within the meaning of s 4 of the Explosive Substances Act 1908 it is not essential to specify in the charge the explosive substance which the accused have conspired to have in their possession or under their control. A person may be guilty of criminal conspiracy even though the illegal act which he has agreed to do has not been done for the crime of conspiracy consists only in the agreement or confederacy to do an illegal act by legal means or a legal act by illegal means. Reg v Hibbert 13 Cox 82, Quinn v Leathem [1901] A C 495, The Queen v Most 7 Q B D 244 14 Cox 583 and O Connell v The Queen 11 Cl & F 155 1 Cox 413 5 St Tr N S 1 referred to. The indictment in all cases of conspiracy must in the first place charge the conspiracy but in stating the object of the conspiracy the same degree of certainty is not required as in an indictment for the offence conspired to be committed. The King v Gill 2 B & Ald 204, The Queen v Kenrick 5 Q B 49, The Queen v Blake 6 Q B 126, Sydserff v The Queen 11 Q B 245, The Queen v Gompertz 9 Q B 824 2 Cox 145, Aspinall v The Queen 2 Q B D 48, Taylor v The Queen [1895] 1 Q B 25, R v Parker 3 Q B 292 referred to. It is a wise precaution that the Court should adhere to the language of the statute as far as practicable when a charge is drawn up as nothing is gained by a paraphrase while opportunity is afforded to the accused to take exception to the form of the charge. The accused cannot be convicted on a conspiracy charge under s. 120 B Indian Penal Code unless the prosecution establishes that the accused were members of the conspiracy after the 26th March 1913 when Act VIII of 1913 became law. A comprehensive formula of universal application cannot be framed regarding the question whether two or more acts constitute the same transaction the circumstances which must bear on its determination in each individual case are proximity of time, unity or proximity of place continuity of action and community of purpose or design. If A B and C conspire to make, or have in their possession or under their control, an explosive substance within the meaning of the Explosive Substances Act and in pursuance of

Chuckerbutty I L R 38 Calc 559 15 C W N 593* explained If the accused have committed an offence under s 4 (b) of the Explosive Substances Act 1908 in pursuance of a criminal conspiracy it is open to the Crown to prosecute them for such offences irrespective of the question of the ultimate design of the alleged conspiracy coming under s 121A Indian Penal Code (which charge requires previous sanction under s 196 Criminal Procedure Code) In order to justify the inference of guilt the inculpatory facts must be incompatible with the innocence of the accused and incapable of explanation upon any other reasonable hypothesis than that of his guilt R v Hodge 2 Lewin C C [illegible] referred to The presumption of innocence (in criminal cases) [illegible] be no more than this that if the the circumstances whatever they may be which might reconcile such suspicious appearances with perfect innocence Regina v Frost 4 St Tr N S 85 followed While it is not necessary to prove manual possession of the explosive substance by the accused it must be proved that it was in his power or control possession to be punishable must also be possession with knowledge and assent *The mere revenue and it is clear that since the settlement they have had a primâ facie title to all lands for which they pay revenue such lands being commonly referred to as malguzari lands see Herlad Sein v Doorga Persaud Tewaree 12 Moo I A 259 On the Regulations of the Permanent Settlement the leading authority is Joykissen Mookerjee v Collector of East Burdwan 10 Moo I A 16 in which Lord King down said that the effect of the settlement was to divide chakaran lands into two classes viz thanadari chakaran lands that is land held on service tenure by police officials and all other chakaran lands The former class were by Bengal Regulation I of 1793 s 8 cl 4 made resumable by Government the Government relieving the zamindars from the duty of maintaining a police establishment These lands were in fact shortly afterwards resumed and became Government land the title of the zamindars being extinguished by such resumption As to all other chakaran land whether held by public officers or private servants in lieu of wages they are dealt with by Regulation VIII of 1793 s 41 From ss 37 to 41 inclusive it appears that whatever may be the case with regard to the private lands of the zamindars or with regard to chakaran lands the services for which were purely personal to the zamindar it was clear that thanadari and chaukidari chakaran lands the services for which involved the performance of duties in which the public was interested had not as a rule been taken into account for the purpose of increasing the revenue The effect of a resumption by the Government of chaukidari chakaran lands under the provisions of Bengal Act VI of 1870 is that after the assessment is complete the Collector is under s 50 by order in the scheduled form to transfer to the zamindar subject to such assessment and by s 51 such order operates to transfer the land to the zamindar subject to all contracts thereby made in respect of under and by virtue of which any person other than the zamindar may have any right to any land portion of his estate or tenure in the place in which such land may be situate Those words are wide enough to include and in their Lordships opinion do include the rights of a putnidar under a putni grant by virtue of which the putnidar is lessee of the zamindars interest in the lands resumed and also the rights of a dar putnidar under a dar putni grant Not only therefore does the Act recognize the existing title of the zamindar to the lands resumed but the estate taken by the zamindar under the order of transfer is in confirmation and by way of continuance of his existing estate and when the zamindar or those through whom he claims has or have entered into contracts affecting his existing estate the rights of third parties under those contracts are preserved RANJIT SINGH BAHADUR v KALI DASI DEBI (1917)

8 ———————— Zamindar s title under s 50 The suits which gave rise to this appeal were brought to recover khas possession from the appellant the registered proprietor of extensive zamindaris in the Birbhum District of Bengal of chaukidari chakaran lands resumed by Government and transferred to him under the provisions of the Village Chaukidari Act (Beng Act VI of 1870) The plaintiff in each suit (respondents) was the putnidar or dar putnidar of the village within the boundaries of which the land in each suit was situated It was objected that the appellant had no such interest in the chaukidari chakaran lands as could be conveyed in a putni lease Held (on a consideration of the nature of chaukidari chakaran land the provisions of the Bengal Permanent Settlement of 1793 the Regulations of that time so far as they deal with chakaran lands and the true meaning and effect of Bengal Act VI of 1870) that the zamindar obtained or retained in the chaukidari chakaran lands situate within the territorial boundaries of a village comprised in his zamindari an interest capable of being made the subject of a putni lease The settlement of 1793 recognizes and proceeds on the footing that the zamindars are the actual proprietors of the land for which they undertake to pay the Government

revenue and it is clear that since the settlement they have had a primâ facie title to all lands for which they pay revenue such lands being commonly referred to as malguzari lands see Prahlad Sein v Doorga Persaud Tewaree 1 Moo I A 369 On the Regulations of the Permanent Settlement the leading authority is Joykissen Mookerjee v Collector of East Burdwan 10 Moo I A 16 in which Lord Kingsdown said that the effect of the settlement was to divide chakaran lands into two classes ti thanadari chakaran land that is land held on service tenure by police officials and all other chakaran lands The former class were by Bengal Regulation I of 1793 s 8 cl 4 made resumable by Government the Government relieving the zamindars from the duty of maintaining a police establishment These lands were in fact shortly afterwards resumed and became Government land the title of the zamindars being extinguished by such resumption As to all other chakaran lands whether held by public officers or private servants in lieu of wage they are dealt with by Regulation VIII of 1793 s 41 From s 37 to 41 inclusive it appears that whatever may be the case with regard to the private lands of the zamindars or with regard to chakaran lands the services for which were purely personal to the zamindar it was clear that thanadari and chaukidari chakaran land the services for which involved the performance of duties in which the public was interested had not as a rule been taken into account for the purpose of increasing the revenue The effect of a resumption by the Government of chaukidari chakaran lands under the provisions of Bengal Act VI of 1870 is that after the assessment is complete the Collector is under s 50 by order in the scheduled form to transfer to the zamindar subject to such assessment and by s 51 such order operates to transfer the land to the zamindar subject to all contracts thereby made in respect of under and by virtue of which any person other than the zamindar may have any right to any land portion of his estate or tenure in the place in which such land may be situate Those words are wide enough to include and in their Lordships opinion do include the rights of a putnidar under a putni grant by virtue of which the putnidar is lessee of the zamindars interest in the lands resumed and also the rights of a dar putnidar under a dar putni grant Not only therefore does the Act recognize the existing title of the zamindar to the lands resumed but the estate taken by the zamindar under the order of transfer is in confirmation and by way of continuance of his existing estate and when the zamindar or those through whom he claims has or have entered into contract affecting his existing estate the rights of third parties under those contracts are preserved RANJIT SINGH BAHADUR v KALI DASI DEBI (1917)

——— Sale of property of person who had died pending attachment without making the legal representatives of deceased parties if valid—Objection not taken in application to set aside sale if may be taken by suit Under the old Civil Procedure Code of 1882 an attachment once made did not necessarily fall with the dismissal of the application for execution Also if a judgment debtor died before the sale but after attachment the sale was not necessarily invalid merely because the legal representative of the judgment-debtor had not been brought on the record The omission was regarded at most as an irregularity which might lay the sale open to attack under the provisions of s 311 of the Code. Where in a proceeding to set aside an execution sale the applicants set up the case that the person whose property purported to have been sold and whose legal representatives they were had died before the decree and did not put forward the case upon which they later on sued to set aside the sale viz.

——— ss. 13, 462—Res judicata—Consent decree—[illegible] partition [illegible] paying land revenue jointly to Government—Lands do not thereby become impartible—Compromise—Minor—Sanction of Court. A suit for the partition of a village was resisted on the plea that the village was impartible, first because the arrangement with Government had all along been that the tenants-in-common should be jointly responsible to Government for the land revenue and, secondly because in a previous suit between the parties it was held that the lands in the village were not divisible and only the profits thereof were. The previous suit was decided in terms of a compromise. A minor was a party to it. The guardian of the minor had applied to the Court stating that he had no objection to keep all the lands joint provided the minor got his share of the profits and the Court had made the endorsement that the application had been allowed and filed in the suit. Held overruling the plea that the arrangement settling the relations between Government and the tenants-in-common could not be regarded as determination of the relations between the tenants inter se. Held further that the decision in the previous suit was passed in the terms of a compromise but there was no issue raised and no adjudication on the issue whether the village was impartible. Held also that the Court's sanction had not been obtained under s. 462 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) to the compromise to which a minor was a party. The mere fact that the parties settled among themselves by compromise that the lands should not be divided, but that they should enjoy the profits could not in law impart the character of impartibility to the estate. Impartibility must arise out of some special tenure or by some general, family or local custom. Parties cannot make an estate impartible which is partible. It is opposed to public policy. [illegible] Joel [illegible] v. Gopal Hari Joshi [illegible] L. R. [illegible] I. A. [illegible] followed. PIROJSHAH [illegible] v. [illegible] (1911) I. L. It is a general principle that any one suing in ejectment must prove possession within twelve years the reason for this however is that possession is commonly the effective assertion of title which is relied on but it is not the only one. There is another which in some cases is equally good and that is an assertion of title made in Court and established by a decree. That is good against those who are party defendants to the suit and if the same title is reasserted and made good in a later suit against other opposing parties it is good against them also and entitles to possession whether the title claimant has or has not been in possession within twelve years unless the opponent can defeat the title by adverse possession. and the defendants as judgment-debtors under s. 252 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882. It was, therefore a question in relation to them falling within s. 244 of the Code by reason of the explanation to s. 647 that applications for the execution of the decree were proceedings in suits. The defendants were consequently bound to object to the attachment and sale under that section, so far as the decree holder's action was concerned. It was contended that whatever might have been the result if the decree holder had been a party to the suit the present dispute was between the auction purchaser who was a stranger to the previous suit and the execution proceedings therein, and the defendants, and that s. 244 did not apply Held that though an auction purchaser at a Court sale in execution of a decree was not a party to the suit in which the decree was passed and though he was not a representative of either the decree holder or the judgment-debtor for the purposes of s. 244 yet if the question raised by the judgment-debtor as to the legality of the Court sale was virtually one between the parties to the suit that is between the decree holder and the judgment debtor and if in the decision and result of that question the auction purchaser was interested the judgment-debtor ought not to be allowed to attack the sale in a suit The test in all such cases is whether the ground upon which the Court-sale is attacked as conferring no title upon the auction purchaser affects the parties to the suit and could have as between them been raised and determined under s. 244 and whether the auction purchaser though not a party to that suit is a party interested in the result GOKULSING BHIKARAM v KISAN SINGH (1910) I L R 34 Bom 546

——— Decree—Satisfaction—Decree not carrying interest—Mortgage passed in satisfaction of decretal debt made payable in instalments—Interest payable on failure to pay instalments—Covenant for interest can be severed from the covenant as to repayment of principal—Agreement not void so far as concerned principal The plaintiff obtained a decree against the defendant for Rs. 800 without interest but with costs which amounted to Rs 89 12 0 In satisfaction of the decretal debt and in consideration of a cash advance of Rs 10 4 0 the defendant passed a mortgage deed for Rs 900 in favour of the plaintiff The amount of Rs 900 was repayable in nine annual instalments of Rs 100 each. On failure to pay any one instalment interest was to be charged at the rate of 1¼ per cent per mensem and the whole amount became payable on failure to pay any two instalments. None of the instalments having been paid the plaintiff sued to recover Rs 900 principal and Rs 900 as interest The lower Courts held that the mortgage deed contravened the provisions of s 257A of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) but they passed a decree for Rs 900 in plaintiff's favour as the covenant to pay interest was quite distinct and severable from the covenant to pay principal The defendant having appealed Held confirming the decree that the primary and main agreement was to pay a sum of money which was not in excess of the decretal amount and that it was only on failure to fulfil that agreement that interest was to be charged that is it was only something which came into operation when there was a breach of the agreement and that the primary agreement was therefore not void under s 257A of the Civil Procedure Code 1882 Bhagchand v Padhakisan I L R 28 Bom 62 followed. the adjustment not having been certified to the Court, it could not recognise it as valid but was bound to execute the decree. The Subordinate Judge overruled the contention holding that as the decree-holder had, after the adjustment, received for several years moneys under it, he was estopped by conduct under s. 115 of the Indian Evidence Act 1872. Held that the view of the Subordinate Judge gave the go-by to the plain language of the last paragraph of s. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code 1882. There is no room left by the law for the operation of the law of estoppel in the matter of execution. The last paragraph of s. 258 enacts a special law for a special purpose whereas s. 115 of the Indian Evidence Act 1872 relates to the general law of estoppel and the principle is that a special law overrides for its purposes the general law. Per CHANDAVARKAR, J—Fraudulent executions of decrees must be discouraged by the Courts whenever they come to their notice and decree-holders who enter freely into adjustments outside the Court and do not certify them as required by law but fraudulently apply for execution ignoring the adjustment should be dealt with under the criminal law. Per HEATON J—The purpose of s. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code 1882 is that the Court shall have complete knowledge of all that is done towards the satisfaction of its decree. The provisions of s 276 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) make the private alienation void not absolutely but only as against all claims enforceable under the attachment referred to in it Where the execution proceedings, in the course and for the purpose of which the attachment was made have come to an end on account of satisfaction of the decree by the judgment debtor and in consequence the decree is no longer alive the attachment also ceases and there is no longer any claim enforceable under the attachment to make the private alienation effected by the judgment debtor under the attachment void The person for whose protection s 276 was primarily intended has had his claim in that event satisfied otherwise than by the attachment As to any claim under another decree cognizable under s 295 that had been dependent on the continuance of the said attachment when that attachment was swept away all other claims cognizable under it ceased to be operative for the purposes of ss 276 and 295 The only bar in the way of the private alienation was removed as if it never existed in law and the question as to the private alienation made by the judgment-debtor to the defendant during the attachment became reduced to one between that judgment debtor and his alienee KHUSHALCHAND v NANDRAM SAHEBRAM (1911)

This does not conflict in any way with the statutory definition of notice in s. 3 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) A purchaser of property is under no legal obligation to investigate his vendor's title But in dealing with real property as in other matters of business regard is had to the usual course of business and a purchaser who wilfully departs from it in order to avoid acquiring a knowledge of his vendor's title is not allowed to derive any advantage from his wilful ignorance of defects which would have come to his knowledge if he had transacted his business in the ordinary way This is what is meant by reasonable care in s 41 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) Occupation of property which has not come to the knowledge of the party charged is not constructive notice of any interest in the property MANJI KARIMBHAI v HOORBAI (1910)

Ultimately the suit was compromised between the mortgagor and mortgagee and a decree passed in terms of the compromise Neither to the compromise nor to the decree recording the compromise was defendant No 2 a party In execution of the decree the mortgaged property was sold at a Court sale and purchased by the plaintiff When the plaintiff attempted to recover possession of the property he was obstructed by defendant No 2 who was in possession On an application to remove the obstruction the Court made an order for the removal of the obstruction in February 1908 The plaintiff recovered possession of the property in March 1908 but was dispossessed in June 1908 The plaintiff filed a suit in 1913 to recover possession of the property from defendant No 2 Held that the order for removal of obstruction was referable to s 335 and not s 334 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882 that it was binding on defendant No 2 and that as defendant No 2 took no steps to have the same set aside within one year of its date it had become final. In 1896 the plaintiff's father mortgaged his house to defendant No 1 for Rs 1000. After his death his widow on behalf of her minor son (plaintiff) referred the mortgage claim to arbitration. The arbitrators settled the claim at Rs 1200. Defendant No 1 applied to the Court for a decree in terms of the award and the widow having consented a decree was passed. In execution of the decree the house was put up to sale and purchased by defendant No 1 for Rs. 1700. The plaintiff attained majority in September 1911 and sued in August 1912 for a declaration that the decree was null and void, and for taking accounts of the mortgage of 1896 under the provisions of the Dekkhan Agriculturists Relief Act (XVII of 1879). He alleged that the arbitrators in taking accounts did not give him the benefit of the Dekkhan Agriculturists Relief Act that in the Court proceedings that followed on the award no guardian was appointed for him and that at the Court sale the house was sold at an undervalue. Held that inasmuch as the plaintiff's interest had not been duly protected the absence of a guardian ad litem in the Court proceedings of 1901 rendered the decree null and void under s. 443 of Civil Procedure Code of 1882. Held therefore that the plaintiff was entitled to accounts of the mortgage of 1896 under the provisions of the Dekkhan Agriculturists Relief Act 1879. The decision of the Judicial Committee in Harnarain Singh v Bhagwant Kuar I L R 13 All 300 cannot be treated as in any way in conflict with the later decision of the Judicial Committee in the case of Ghulam Khan v Muhammad Hasan I L R 29 Calc 16 s c 6 C W N 26 inasmuch as in the former case no question as to the competency of the appeal was raised either before the Judicial Committee or in the High Court. Where no application to set aside the award was made to the lower Court within the period of limitation prescribed by Art 158 of the Limitation Act by the guardian ad litem of the appellant who was a minor at the time Held that the appellant could not be allowed to invite the High Court to interfere with the decree in the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction even on the ground that the reference to arbitration was made with the concurrence of a person who had no authority to act on behalf of the guardian of the appellant and that the award had therefore no existence in the eye of the law. ——— Arbitration—Award going beyond terms of reference if valid—Party benefited if may repudiate award—Acceptance of award in part if permissible. The plaintiff's right of passage along a pathway across the defendant's land being disputed by the latter the question of its existence was referred to an arbitrator who found that the pathway did in fact exist as alleged but he laid out a new pathway in lieu of it holding that if the thoroughfare was allowed to continue great inconvenience would be caused to the defendant. Held that although an arbitrator is allowed greater latitude than Courts of law in departing from rules of practice which Courts have adopted for general convenience and an arbitrator's award is not open to interview on the merits upon grounds of error of law as well as of facts an arbitrator cannot go beyond the precise questions submitted. But even though the arbitrator may have exceeded his authority it is not open to the party benefited by the award to take exception to it on that ground and the defendant therefore was bound

——— s 7(1) (b) Sch 69 70 Sch III—Decree—Interest awarded up to realisation—Execution—Interest calculated in darkhast up to its date—Collector carrying on execution and paying interest and amount as prayed in darkhast—Court directing Collector to continue execution till payment of interest up to realisation—Discretion of Collector—Jurisdiction of Court The plaintiffs obtained a money decree against the defendants which awarded interest on the decretal amount up to its realisation. They applied to execute the decree and calculated interest over the decretal amount up to the date of the application The Collector to whom the execution proceedings were transferred placed the defendants estate under his management and when the decretal amount and interest as calculated in the plaintiffs application were paid up he treated the decree as satisfied and returned the execution proceedings to the Court The Court sent back the proceedings to the Collector asking him to continue in management till interest over the decretal amount from the date of the application to the date of realisation was paid to the plaintiffs The District Court held on appeal that the Court had no jurisdiction to interfere with what lay completely within the Collector's jurisdiction and reversed the order On second appeal Held restoring the order passed by the first Court that under the provisions of s 7 (1) (b) of the third schedule of the Civil Procedure Code of 1908 the Collector had to take into account the whole amount with the total interest awarded by the decree and that that would include not merely interest up to the date of the application but also interest which would run according to the decree thereafter Per CHANDAVARKAR J—The Civil Procedure Code (s 69 and 70) of 1908 gives authority to the Collector for the purpose of enabling him to determine the best mode or modes of satisfying the decree whether it is to be satisfied by management by the Collector himself of the land attached in execution of the decree or whether it is to be by its sale or letting So far therefore as the machinery necessary for the satisfaction of the decree is concerned the Collector is the sole authority The discretion is his and no Civil Court can interfere with that discretion. But that discretion does not extend to any jurisdiction in the Collector to determine whether the decree itself has been satisfied or not The latter jurisdiction is the Civil Court's It is that Court above which is competent to determine the question judicially BHURCHAND HANSRAJ v VIRA CHAMPA (1912) I L R 37 Bom 32

On this issue it was contended in second appeal by the plaintiff that the lower Courts which dismissed his suit on the ground that it was not maintainable in a Civil Court should have dealt with the case as if the plaintiff was suing as a member of the public claiming as such to be entitled to be carried in a cross palanquin if he chose to adopt that method of procession The plaintiff also asked that he should be allowed to amend his plaint accordingly Held refusing the amendment (1) that the claim made as a member of the public was inconsistent with the plaintiff's original claim that he was entitled to be carried in procession as Jagadguru and (2) that on the pleadings the issue raised in the trial Court was irrelevant and ought not to have been admitted. Mahomed Buksh Khan v Hosseini Bibi (1888) L R 15 I A 81 relied on ANDANISWAMI v TOTADSWAMI (1920) I L R 45 Bom 590

It does not contemplate that the Court has no jurisdiction to order an award to be filed only because it deals with manpan that is matters relating to a complement or dignity about which the Courts would have no jurisdiction to entertain suits It is the policy of law to enable parties who by private arrangement settle a dispute to have that settlement made legally effective If there is something to arbitrate on and there is a reference and an award the policy of the law is that that award should be given effect to without minute inquiry by the Court Disputes about mánpan which cannot be settled in the Courts can often only be effectively settled by arbitration. He died in 1898 and the execution proceedings were continued by his brother as his representative In March 1902 the brother also died leaving minor sons On the 2 th June 1902 the guardian or the next friend of the minors applied to have the minors brought on the record as representing their father for continuing the execution proceedings This application was rejected in September 1902 and the original application for execution which was presented by the judgment creditor on default was also struck off On the 1st September 1909 a fresh application to execute the original decree was presented by the minor sons of the judgment creditor's said brother one of the minors having in the meanwhile attained majority The application was met by the objection that as it was made after the expiration of twelve years from the date of the default mentioned in the consent decree sought to be executed it was barred by s 48 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908) Held that the fresh application was time barred as being made twelve years after the date of the default Art 182 of the Limitation Act (IX of 1908) showed that the fresh periods which could be obtained under the provisions of that article did not escape the provisions of s 48 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908) S 48 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908) is more extensive in its application than s 230 of the Code of 1882 and it is wide enough to cover the compromise decree of which execution was sought BALA RAM VITHALCHAND v MARUTI (1914)

The conclusion that because an Assistant Collector was discharging the functions of the Collector under the provisions of s 11 of the Land Revenue Code (Bom Act V of 1879) in revenue matter he was therefore entitled to discharge his functions with reference to suits filed under s 92 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908) is erroneous. 11 ——— Onus Misplaced—Trial of wrong issue—Onus wrongly placed—Decision not supported by any evidence—Quantum of evidence. Mere errors in decision on matters of law and fact are not within the scope of s. 115 of the Civil Procedure Code 1908 Cls. (a) and (b) of that section deal with the question of jurisdiction and cl (c) refers to illegal or irregular processual acts. An application under s 115 of the Civil Procedure Code was made to the High Court from a decision of the Judge of the Presidency Small Cause Court on the following grounds —(i) That the wrong issue was tried (ii) that the onus was misplaced (iii) that there was no evidence to support the decision. Held that the trial of the issue in the form it was raised amounted to an error in law and not to an illegality or material irregularity in the procedure Held further that under the circumstances of the case the mere fact that the onus was wrongly placed on the defendant did not entitle the Court to interfere under s. 115 Held al o that inasmuch as there was some evidence on which the Court acted there could not be any interference under the section HARAN CHANDRA CHATTERJI v CORPORATION OF ROYAL EXCHANGE ASSURANCE (1919) 23 C W N 759

12 ——— Criminal Procedure Code s. 195 (6)—Sanction to prosecute—Sanction granted by Munsif—Revisional powers of District Judge One of the parties to a civil suit applied for sanction to prosecute the plaintiff on the ground that he had instituted a false claim. The Munsif dis mis ed the application on technical grounds. The applicant applied to the District Jud e under s. 195 (6) of the Code of Criminal Procedure The Judge remanded the case to the Mun if for trial of the application. Held that the powers of revision exercisable by the District Judge were confined to those conferred by s. 195 Criminal Procedure Code and he had no jurisdiction to make the order of remand. property to sale when the plaintiffs deposited in Court the necessary amount in satisfaction of the decree The plaintiffs brought an action for declaration that the defendants were liable to pay the judgment debt and they themselves had paid the money under circumstances which entitled them in equity to recover the same from the defendants The suit was described as one for contributions The lower Courts dismissed the plaintiffs claim on the ground that as the decree had been obtained by co sharer landlords the interest of the plaintiffs in the tenancy was not in jeopardy and the payment made by them must consequently be deemed voluntary The plaintiffs appealed to the High Court Held that contribution signifies payment by each of the parties interested of his share in any common liability Consequently an action for contribution is a suit brought by one of such parties who has discharged the liability common to them all to compel the others to make good their shares That the suit as framed could not be deemed a suit for contribution it was really a suit by the plaintiffs for recovery of money paid by them for the benefit of the defendants That Art 41 of the Second Schedule to the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act does not cover the present case The suit was clearly one of a nature cognizable by a Court of Small Causes and as the sum claimed was less than Rs 500 the appeal was incompetent under s 102 Civil Procedure Code and must be dismissed That the view taken by the lower Courts that the payment made by the plaintiffs was voluntary as the decree for rent was obtained by co sharer landlords who could not have executed it so as to prejudice the interest of the plaintiffs was erroneous The question of the precise effect of a sale in these circumstances would at any rate be a matter for controversy and the party liable to be affected would consequently be entitled to satisfy the decree to protect himself from the apprehended injury to his right he would also be entitled if he made the payment to be reimbursed under s 69 or s 70 of the Indian Contract Act Held however as to the application of the plaintiffs for the memorandum of appeal being treated as an application for revision that the error committed by the lower Court being one of law and not affecting the jurisdiction of the Court the High Court could not interfere in the exercise of its revisional powers SATYA BHUSAN BANNERJEE v KRISHNA KALI BANNERJEE (1914) 18 C W N 1308
